and I have spent the weekend bonding and it has been incredibly helpful for T. They have become best buds, playing games, trading stories, staying up late to watch movies and football together (they both slept on the couch because they stayed up way later than me). I am eager for T to receive the same sort of focused attention and unconditional love from my mom when she moves here in two weeks; T really blossoms with love. n was scheduled to leave yesterday but decided to stay through the weekend for C. n struggled when n first tried to depart). is still struggling. He climbs into bed with me each morning to be held, tears streaming down his cheeks.

Please try to remain kind and respectful. I am truly devastated by all that has happened. Devastated. I sustained myself with your love and the love of our family. I miss you so much it hurts, and I still pray you will reconsider all of our futures.

Love,
Scotty

They pronounce it kinny around here, with a letter "I." And he won't know the difference anyway.

I told you all along I wouldn't compete against love, would move on if you had already done so. But you kept telling me lies, leading me on, denying your relationships, toying with my heart, making quiet overtures, giving me false hope. Pure evil. I will never forgive you. I will let these memories fade.

Is he the one who is hacking into my computer? Is he going to set up all kinds of internet falsities about me? Is he going to drive to the house and try to take the kids because he thinks we're all involved in hurting 's and 's psyche?

I do. I'm sorry. The pain is still raw and my imagination runs wild. And it's not helped by you.

Some day you will tell me you love me again.

It almost happened two days ago (4 is very close to 5).
